Client success story

If you're looking to strengthen the skills within your teams so you can have a greater impact in the organization and beyond, let Nagaoka International's story inspire you.

The business enrolled their teams on our BSI ISO 9001 QMS Internal Auditor Practitioner Qualification. This enabled them to successfully upskill their staff while increasing employee engagement and retention, and giving people a valuable qualification for the future.

Nagaoka's objective was to improve competence

Based in Japan, Nagaoka is an energy and water-related business firm that employs a number of internal auditors. Having appointed several new ones to the team and conducted in-house training, the firm realized it wanted to improve their auditing competence while motivating the department.

Flexible learning options that made upskilling easy

The answer was to help each member of the team to obtain a BSI Auditor Qualification. The training was in person and online, which meant individuals could train more flexibly from home, arranging their learning around their work commitments.

Motivated learners, better audits

By acquiring BSI auditor qualifications, Nagaoka's team of sixteen internal auditors has each grown more competent and motivated, with a valuable qualification that progresses their career. Meanwhile, the firm maintains a systematic QMS and the ability to improve the consistency and quality of their internal audits.
